Wise up to the new era of glamour: turbans feel right again. From Cleopatra to Marie Antoinette to Lana Turner (see the 1941 film Zeigfeld Girl for epic star-spangled turban inspo) to Bianca Jagger at the London Palladium to Adwoa Aboah on the cover of the December 2017 issue, turbans have long been associated with supremely stylish women, all of whom possess endless after-dark allure. And this Christmas party season, turbans retain their exotic magnetism. Plump for Gucci's disco-fabulous metallic gold drapery if you dare, or adopt Missoni's insta-ready zig-zag outfit enhancer. The thing to remember: wear them with insouciance. And channel the nonchalance behind Rachel Zoe's immortal words: "I would wear a turban to Whole Foods".
